

Join us in a season of prayer, thanksgiving, and reflection. We invite you to consider what is sacred in our midst.

Peace and all good,
Christine, FSC's Director

a word from Katie

People often assume a spiritual center is a place for people with unwavering faith. That hasn't been my experience. Working here has shown me something different. I've watched people arrive carrying grief, uncertainty, loneliness, curiosity, and hope. Not everyone comes because they have answers. Many come because they have questions.

As an administrative assistant, I spend most of my time behind the scenes. I answer emails, help people register for programs, and prepare the details for our wonderful programs. It may not seem like sacred work, but over time I've realized that every interaction matters. Sometimes people are excited to attend. Sometimes they're hesitant or unsure if they belong. Again and again, I've seen how they're met with kindness rather than expectation of certainty.

I've also had the opportunity to read nearly every program description that comes through our office. Whether the topic is prayer, writing, SoulCollage®, spiritual direction, or simply learning to be present, there is a common thread: an invitation to slow down and make room for God and his loving Presence.

I don't know where everyone is on their spiritual journey. I do know they're welcomed. In a world that often demands certainty before belonging - I've come to see how rare this is.

Welcome,

Katie Lazarus
